WASTE SAVING PROGRAM

It bad idea to own a Snark Moped. With gas prices so high and the head of our country, and his brother, establishing such fine relations with other foreign countries, we might all have to own mopeds before long.

Having a moped would surely cut down on insurance costs, registration is not necessary in New Jersey, and when was the last time your car got 150 miles to a gallon of gas, besides that time it was on tow truck.

Here is your chance to own one of these super-econo modes of transportation. Not for a high cash outlay, but for a mere waste saving suggestion. You'll have more than one chance to win, and if you don't win the moped, you might have a $50.00 savings bond in line for you.

All it takes is one good waste reduction idea. At the end of each yearly quarter, if your suggestion has saved a Snark moped will be yours, beside already having won a $50.00 savings bond, it's that simple.

So turn those good waste reduction ideas into cash. You can't go to the Pathmark and buy groceries with suggestions, so here's your chance to win something a tad more negotiable.

See Frank McGoff for any further details.

DOMESTIC COMPETITION DIMS PROFIT OUTLOOK

Roger F. Jones, President & General Manager LNP Corp., Malvern, Penn.

"We see 1979 as a relatively good year for American business, despite complaints that it will not be as strong as 1977 or 1978. Real growth of something less than 3% in the GNP seems likely, although there are a number of troublesome factors that defy reasonable prediction, such as inflation-caused changes in interest rates, energy costs, and the rise in taxes in certain sectors of the economy (which will only be partially offset by the recent tax cuts).

"Despite a leveling off in construction and automotive sales, we believe the plastics industry will outperform the general economy by the usual factor of 2 to 3 times, while foreign competition in plastics will be of little consequence, U.S. competition will become much keener, as more suppliers enter this attractive market and existing suppliers increase capacity. Hence, profit growth may well be nonexistent. Many smaller firms will be squeezed between this competitive restraint on product price increases and inflation-fed cost escalations, particularly in labor, freight, and the cost of capital. The impact of wage-price guidelines (or controls) is impossible to gauge at this point, other than to say that they will probably prove ineffective or will cause shortages to appear.

"LNP plans to meet this challenge in two ways, adding to our carbon fiber-reinforced thermoplastic materials and injection molding magnetic materials, we anticipate introducing new compounds that will offer greater cost benefits to design engineers. Also, we plan a more aggressive posture in mass markets. LNP will bring onstream its third American plant, in early spring, 1979, located in Columbus, Indiana, in the center of the automobile and appliance industry."

JUST ADD THE GOOD

Lets all add up the good, also the bad
Think of all the things, we never had
Then take all the good, and itemize
Each minute, of every day, and finalize
Remember the bad, don't let it return
Forget all those words, once said so stern
Bury all, in your thoughts, of the good
Hold it high above, where once the bad stood
Count love first, for its the best of the two
Itemize all the little things, others gave you
Even if it be just, a word or a deed
Consider each gift, in thought take heed
Count it as good, don't add if it be bad
Remember too, perhaps its all they ever had
Show compassion, it always feels good
To you or they, just let it be understood
Give feelings from the heart, its wealth to share
Let them feel good, knowing you care
They'll forget the bad, if the good is given free
Let them add all the good, the bad they won't see
May we all count, just the good, each day, everyway
Let the bad stay, in the silence, of yesterday

TAKING AIM WITH BOB SCOTT

I would hate to be the target when Bob Scott picks up the pistol at a shooting match. In the past nine years shooting prc Bob has accumulated more than 40 trophies and numerous other first place awards for his outstanding marksmanship. He is also an avid member of several pistol associations, and competes in matches in five states.

Besides his professional shooting career, Bob also seems to find time for hunting and fishing as well as having been a member of the Guttenberg volunteer fire depart

Bob, who has been a Dri-Print Foils for 12 years, starting as a coating operator, and later transferred to a newly formed Gravure Roller Department, to help coordinate roller supply with manufacturing demands. Most recently he has been promoted to manager of the Gravure Department.

Due to his past experience with the fire department, Bob has been appointed chief of the Dri-Print Foils Fire Brigade, which is recognized by the local fire department.

With the snow and cold weather possibly starting to break Bob will be looking forward to competing in 1979 shooting matches, of which Dri-Print Foils wishes him the best of luck.
